Chapter 1 by Landin Weaver

The day is July 12, 2018 and you wake up like a normal day but today is the apocalypse.

Chapter 2 by LOUELLA CLARK

Like every school day, I awake at 6 am, I do my yoga and go outside for a jog, I've nearly finished the normal route I go on when I hear footsteps, slow, uneven. they wh\ere getting closer, I stopped. turned around to see what's following me. It was a small child, no older that 7. "Excuse me, little girl, what are you doing?" She walked towards me, uttered a quiet moan, and started sprinting. "Hey stop!" I ran forward towards the road, and ran past the cars to the other end of the street. "that should stop her..." I mumbled. I don't know what had happened. the way she behaved, It was like an animal. It scared me. I turned around to look at the street, she was still following me. she ran across the street, "No Stop!" I yelled as a car honked, and swerved around her. Dust, smoke, the smell of burning flesh. I came closer. Although the child was strange, I hoped with all my life she was okay. "Little girl?" something stood in the smoke, something i could only hope was the small child. I was reassured. Something pounced. without a moments notice, I got pushed the ground. The little girl scratched and clawed at me, I pushed her off, and she bit my hand. taking with her a large bite of flesh. I screamed in pain. It was hard to breathe. I pushed her off of me. Stood up and made a run for it. "oh my god, what.. what happened." I stammered. out of breath and scared for my life. The little girl was gone. I looked down at my hand. seeing the blood drip from it was horrifying. but watching it change color scared me even more. my skin turned paler, and I felt as though I was dying. My legs could not hold me up anymore, I collapsed to the ground and started coughing. Blood poured out of my mouth. The pain was stopping and I laid on the floor. "Goodbye" I murmured to myself as I succumb to the pain.
